Sam Barrett — Parent Governor

“I have always taken a keen interest in education, from growing up with a parent employed in a secondary school to having children myself, education has always seemed to be part of my life. Over the past ten years I have discovered a keen interest in Neurodiversity and following a twenty-year career in museums, I took the leap and moved into supporting Neurodiverse families and adults, whilst also working closely with the local SENDIASS team. I am passionate about supporting SEN children in schools and believe wholeheartedly that every child deserves to feel safe and supported in the school environment. I became SEN governor to support this and enjoy working closely with the school SENCo to ensure that both children and staff feel confident in this area.”
